What's in a name? Everything.

There are a few places on earth where people live longer, happier and healthier lives than the rest of the planet. These areas are called Blue Zones.

The people living in these zones share a key thing in common: friendship. On average people in these zones will travel through life with Five Good Friends. The stress shedding power of friendship is believed to be the key contributing factor in a better, longer quality of life.

This understanding is not only reflected in our name – it is our guiding philosophy.
